The Delivery Technician Certification™ Program (DTCP) is a national certification course for personnel responsible for medical equipment delivery, set up, and patient education. The course also tests the delivery technicians understanding and comprehension of the federal rules and regulations governing the delivery of medical equipment and potentially hazardous materials such as oxygen and nitrous oxide gases.

The DTCP addresses the Department of Transportation (DOT) rules and regulations regarding commercial motor vehicles, HAZMAT training, and drug and alcohol testing. It also covers OSHA universal precaution training as well as HIPAA privacy requirements and the federal security regulations.

Upon completion of the DTCP and receiving a passing grade on the certification test a delivery technician is now a certified delivery technician. This certification is good for three years and recertification can be obtained via attending another DTCP or taking an on- line recertification test. This recertification test is administered only to those delivery technicians that have previously attended a DTCP offered by SCMESA or AA Homecare.

The DTCP examines the delivery technician’s working knowledge of the following areas:

- DOT HAZMAT regulations
- Best Delivery Practices
- OSHA Universal Precautions training
- Drug & Alcohol Testing regulations
- HIPAA Privacy Rule requirements
- Industry Standards applications

With fee schedule and industry standards changes coming soon, the successful HME business cannot afford to have anything but trained and certified delivery technicians on their staff. Enroll your drivers in this program to protect your patients and your business!
